Solidarity with McDonald's Workers fighting for Rights at Work – Fundraising Music Night. 7pm Friday, November 17th at the Elephant Inn, Finchley, 283 Ballards Ln, London N12 8NR

A night of music and solidarity. All proceeds to the official support fund!

McDonald's UK workers are striking for the first time in UK history, over the company's failure to offer them acceptable working conditions, job security or even an affordable living wage. Workers have found themselves living on low wages - with no guarantee of hours. Now, workers feel as if they have no alternative but to take action - all in line with their basic workplace rights and company procedures. This McDonald's UK strike forms part of a growing global movement calling for the fair and decent treatment of workers.

Despite McDonald's being one of the UK's largest, most profitable, and globally recognised employers, its employees are subjected to difficult, yet avoidable working conditions - working on insecure zero-hour contracts for low-wages. This historic strike forms part of a growing global workers movement for fairness. In the USA, more than 10 million workers in the U.S. are on a path to $15 an hour, and 20 million workers total have won wage increases since 2012.

Now, McDonald's workers in the UK will fight to achieve the same impressive results seen by their transatlantic colleagues. Barnet Trades Council invites anyone who wants to support this struggle, and thanks the Elephant Inn and our excellent band, Wutip. See you all there!
